SNOW UPDATE

DATE: January 12, 2009

TIME: 08:45 AM

Predictions for flurries up to one inch accumulation to begin around this morning's rush hour turned into a significant event early this morning.

Snow fall began at about 05:00 AM and accumulated quickly.

Snow amounts are up to 6" in some parts of town.

Flurries will continue until about noon.

The bad news is the timing of the snow is making for a messy morning. The good news is we will have all day to clear snow and prepare for the afternoon rush.

Blowing snow will cause additional difficulties. We will monitor sites but drifting can be unpredictable. Please notify us of any problems. We will have crews on stand by throughout our service area ready to respond.

Temperatures are expected to rise into the high 50's tomorrow and there are no more snow events predicted for the next ten days.

Thank you,

Wm Michael Farrell, MBA, MSIB, ISA, APLD
