SNOW UPDATE

DATE: April 3, 2009

TIME: 8:30 AM

Good Morning:

The storm seems to be tracking north of us. Predictions for snowfall amounts are dropping to 4"-8". As usual, I find it more accurate to track the trend of the forecast, rather than the forecast itself. This storm is tending to the weaker side.

However, being on the edge of the storm can mean more wind. Predictions for the duration of the storm are lengthening into Sunday. Small amounts of snow with wind over long periods of time can cause more problems than a short, hard snowfall.

The forecasters do not have a good handle on this storm. Tracking as it is, we could get nothing. If it slips a little south, we could get a lot. Either way, we will be resting today to prepare for an all-nighter tonight.
