SNOW UPDATE

DATE: December 7, 2009

TIME: 07:30 AM

Timing is everything with snow removal and timing has been poor all year. This storm is no different. I started snowing early Sunday morning but accumulations were not sufficient to begin operations until after 10:00 AM Sunday.

Snow trickled on and off all day. Another 3" were forecasted so packed snow and ice buildup was a concern. The major accumulation did not materialize but we did have to clear most sites a second time. Crews are taking a rest at this hour. The only good news is the second cleaning went quickly and sidewalks are clear for this morning's rush hour.

We are expecting snow for the next 36 hours. Chance of accumulation is 90% starting this afternoon into the overnight period. We will be proactive in trying to prevent ice buildup and maintaining safe conditions for the clients.

As always, we have response teams circulating the city looking for icy conditions. Please notify us if any dangerous conditions exist and we will respond immediately.

Thank you,

Wm Michael Farrell, MBA, MSIB, ISA, APLD
