Snow Update 12/17/2012 8:30 PM

As of 8:30 PM tonight, weather predictions are wildly varied. We do know that there is a strong system moving through our area. At the least, we will see colder temperatures and high winds. Forecasts are calling for 16" at the 6000 foot elevation line. That's pretty close to us.

We are prepared and will follow the development of the storm through the night. All sources are saying that snow will not develop until just before sunrise Wednesday morning. If we do wake to a blanket of snow, it will have fallen just hours before.

A couple inches of snow and high winds are likely Wednesday, ending by midnight. We will do our best to time services around rush hour.

Thank you,
